Appellant's particular interest in the outcome of the appeal:
Established in the 1960s the Ivearagh Fishermen's Coop has been representing local fishermen since then. The majority of active commercial fishermen based in South Kerry are members and our membership includes many former and retired fishermen also This appeal is being made of these members. The original request came from members who felt the decision will have a significant negative economic impact on their business and they weren't consulted adequately prior to the decision being made. Neither the Coop or any of its members were aware of the application until after the closing date of the public consultation and on that basis failed to make a submission during the public consultation

In the determination notice the Minister outlined that he had made the decision in the belief that it was "in the public interest" we dispute this, further and specifically ,

The determination notice claims that there will be " No significant effects arise regarding wild fisheries". We dispute this. Having obtained from DAFM a copy of the response made by the SPPA as a statutory consultee we are aware that the content of that response concurs with this our position.

Two of our members have relied on this area covered by the sites for the entire of their fishing careers, a period spanning several decades.. These members currently operate from Reen Pier, Ballinskelligs. The decision to grant these licences should the planned development proceed will effectively prevent them from operating in the area covered by the site. Their business have a significant economic dependency on the area

Their dependency is based on the following:

The area is productive fishing ground and operating there accounts for a significant portion of their earnings. The area offers an opportunity to fish in relative shelter during prevailing SW wind. The area close to the shore where the seabed is rough is productive and traditional ground for potting for lobster and velvet crab and fishing with lines and nets for pollack. Slightly further from the shore where the seabed is sand and mud the area is productive and traditional ground for brown crab. In addition to being productive fishing ground the relative shelter allows a safe haven to fish successfully for around 9 months of the year during spells of SW wind and swell. Traditionally these members would have moved gear from West and South West of Hogs Head into this area during spells of unsettled weather, not only to fish it during this weather but to reduce the possibility of it becoming lost or damaged in more exposed locations. No other such location within the scope of their operating range offers such opportunity.

Other members that operate from Bunavalla pier have a similar traditional dependency based on a similar operational pattern

It's common local knowledge, based on accounts of previous fishing operations and those of recreational divers that a scallop bed exists in the area. While that bed is not currently being exploited it offers potential for our members and indeed the wider Kerry Inshore

The determination Notice claims that "The proposed development should have a positive effect on the economy of the local area;" we dispute this.

While (if successful) the development may benefit the applicants and have some further downstream benefits, it will have a negative impact on existing proven and successful traditional fishing activity, and it's associated downstream benefit. The anticipated employment, detailed in the application, that will be created by this development is similar or less than the employment that currently supported by the activity it will negatively effect.

In the application it is claimed that Michael Joe O'Driscoll and his family have a "long and close relationship with the seafaring and the fisheries industry" and that Michael would have spent "much of his youth working in the local inshore fisheries". As with most Inshore fishing communities the one in South Kerry is close knit, and despite the claims made in the application, Michael O'Driscoll and his long standing relationship with the local fishing industry is not known to any of our ten South Kerry based members. The two members we have with the highest dependency on the area operate from Reen Pier Ballinskelligs and despite as outlined in the application that Michael O'Driscoll lived "almost on the head of Reen pier" neither of these members have ever met him on the pier and have confirmed that he never went down the pier to discuss the application with them. In fact to the best of our members' knowledge there was no pre application consultation between the applicants and the local Inshore Fishing Community.

Based on the above we are highly sceptical of any net benefit to the local economy or coastal community.

Furthermore, while the area offers relative shelter from poor weather and prevailing South West winds for Commercial fishing operations for approximately nine months of the year, the area has proven itself not suitably sheltered to safely operate without the risk of loss and damage to fishing equipment during the Winter Months. Based on the extensive, collective experience of Members we believe that this site isn't sufficiently sheltered to locate aquaculture infrastructure on a permanent basis. Additionally the closest piers to the site are Reen and Bunavalla piers neither of which is a "safe haven" suitable for operating fishing vessels from, on a permanent basis. Therefore we are concerned that any infrastructure and equipment located at the site may be prevented from being maintained regularly during the Winter months and that coupled with the exposed location during the Winter creates a high risk of damage and loss to any aquaculture infrastructure located at this site. Potential entanglement (of boats and fishing equipment) with damaged and lost Aquaculture equipment poses a serious risk to the viability and more importantly the safety of our members operations. Lost or damaged aquaculture equipment also poses a risk to the Marine environment that sustains the operations of our members.
